WILLIAM COLVER HILL

came to Classical High School in 1910. For twenty-five years he has guided the school wisely. He has had to sift the beneficial from the injurious in changing school objectives. He has had to watch that the ideal of learning should not be lost in the unprecedented increase in the number of pupils. In a time which stressed the practical and the scientific, he has had to contend for the dignity and worth of the imaginative and the humanistic. For his stand in these things the present generation of scholars vindicates him. He has encouraged music; he has tried to keep alive the study of the classics; he has striven to make school athletics contribute to healthful and zestful living. May we, by the dedication of this book, express to him our esteem and respect.

THEODORE GRANGER

THEODORE GRANGER

*Years that we spend
Within these walls, within these doors,
Pass in our sight as time having no end
Until the end.
We come as children, and we go away
Still children, most of us.
Only a few
Have seen what learning means, and groaned
To think what learning means,
And set their faces bravely from these doors
To bite the iron nails of learning,
These walls behind them as a stay.*

JUDITH BEACH.

*Above our stage this arched lunette looks down
And from its soft-toned mural spills
The silence of its thought. As some low sound
Of song within old quiet places stills
Itself with sadness and is hushed with peace,
So here, within an emptied echo-space,
The artist's colors blend and there is cease
Of all but low-sung meaning in their grace:*

*Oh once [they sing] when Indian campfires glowed, were bright,
There came the fathers, sturdy pioneers
Who scorned the savage flicker for a light
Of learning pure and shining through the years,
A light that now gleams here upon this wall —
A fusing ray, the high thought in a hall.*

ELEANOR WITHINGTON.

Dr. Jessie M. Law

By the retirement last year of Dr. Jessie M. Law, Classical lost a teacher loved and respected by all who knew her. For thirty years as head of our history department she worked earnestly to bring about the fine reputation that that division now has for its thoroughness and completeness of scope. Students who came under the spell of Dr. Law's teaching during those thirty years have ever afterward considered it an unforgettable experience. She inspired her courses with an understanding and a humaneness that made fit background for critical interpretations of her subject. Because of these qualities, Dr. Law became to many the embodiment of all that was fine and best in this school. Now that she is gone, Classical will strive to remember always the things for which she stood.

Walter V. McDuffee

The retirement last June of Mr. Walter V. McDuffee was received with deep regret by pupils and teachers alike. Springfield's oldest teacher in point of service, Mr. McDuffee has gained wide-spread recognition as the author of many valuable Latin textbooks, and as a prominent participator in educational research throughout the state and nation. As head of our Latin department, he brought to this school a deep appreciation of the classics. His teaching was mingled with a wisdom and a patience that commanded the respect of all his students. His firm and resourceful judgments have contributed greatly to the high position which Classical has been accorded among the country's preparatory schools. By his withdrawal from active service, Mr. McDuffee has left a gap which will be hard to fill.

Susan R. Scott

Last February, Classical lost another of its able teachers, Miss Susan R. Scott, a woman whose personality and cultural background had come to be a marked force among her students. To the many who knew her, Miss Scott represented all that was best in our New England conservatism combined with a fine broadmindedness. Firm and helpful in her guidance, Miss Scott seasoned her teaching with a spicy, penetrating sense of humor that delighted her pupils. She enlivened her subject with a wide range of knowledge and made it vital and interesting. Indeed, her knowing and timely comments stimulated her classes to enthusiastic, thoughtful work in English. This high standard, together with the regard in which she is held by her pupils, may well be termed Miss Scott's memorial.

Mary H. Woodbury

At the conclusion of this semester, Classical loses another of its competent faculty members, one who has given many years of faithful service to the mathematics department. Since 1912, Miss Mary Hale Woodbury has been with us, working conscientiously, and earnestly helping her pupils to a mastery of her subject. By all her students her instruction has been highly valued both for its thoroughness and its precision. Miss Woodbury was never one to be content with a superficial teaching of her subject; through careful explanation of the more minute details, she made her teaching complete and clear. She leaves with the best wishes of us all, and especially with those of '34½ whose adviser she was for two years.

The Prophecy of the Class of 1934<sup>1</sup>

Time: 1954.

Place: The grand opening of Springfield's largest and finest night club, The Johnson House.

Attracted by a foot-note of the full page announcement of the above mentioned grand occasion, which informed us that student treasury tickets belonging to Classical's '34½ would exempt us from cover charges, we made our way to the palatial mansion for an evening of fun. Others, well known to us way back in those good old days, had the same inclinations; and the party was on.

The owner of the house is none other than Ted
Johnson, who, after many years of study of night clubs in this country and abroad, has opened one of his own with Anita Hebert as hostess.

Ted has secured many of the brightest stars in the country for his floor show. Leading his list of attractions are Joan Sannella, who, at the height of her career in Agawam, was induced to return to her home town, and Edith Dodge, whose voice has thrilled many a radio fan and who has become so great that she fills the large vacancy left by Kate Smith.

Among the guests, however, are still other celebrities which '34½ has produced in the past two decades.

Bob Foss, Believe it or not

The Lady Winchell

Indeed, there are many lights of the political world. Two of our own city fathers, Albert Giles and Stanley Asinof, are leaving their table to congratulate Bob Foss on his election to Congress. This election, alas, has broken up a partnership with John Curtis, in the undertaking business. Milton Fromer, the chief prosecuting attorney of Chicopee Falls with Emmanuel Friedman, who has been jailed twice by Sheriff Frank Fuller for his communistic enterprises, have just joined the group.

Over there at a secluded corner table we see Sylvia Hochman and Irving Kimball, not holding hands as we remember them, for in order to form a more perfect union and insure domestic tranquility they have been married.

Holding the center of feminine solicitude is that great professional football star, Harold Webster, with manager James Bush. Their every move is watched by those two reporters for the "Sports Review", Slotnick and Reed. Stories of Harold's private life are in great demand, as Jane Du Bon is running them in her column of the "Keyhole". Her close friend, Helen Hayes, is now secretary to Walter Winchell whose words don't come so fast as they used to. After a wide search, he found that Helen could talk as fast as he could and had a nose for scandal. America will soon hear a lady Winchell.

Folk Ferré has been discovered among the guests and asked to sing two numbers for us. By request they will be Marie King's latest hits, "With You I Can Sweden My Coffee", and "Stay As Swede As You Are", created especially for Folke, as only "Markie" could create them.

Isn't that Judy Carlton just arriving with that tall dark specimen of Dartmouth manhood. After this twenty year test, Judy, Friedabelle Uchtman, and Jean Wetmore have proven that Shakespeare was right when he said his words of wisdom that love alters not with his brief hours and weeks, but bears it out even to the edge of doom. They are all doomed now, for they have married the objects of their English class dreams. Attention please, Mr. Ed. Smith, who was so skeptical.

Dot Blackie just passed our table. She has recently become president of the Blue Cross Board in recognition of her efforts in creating a Home for Homeless Cats in memory of her own dear Tibbey. Dotty is evidently headed for "Mur" Wright's table. "Mur" finds hubby's purse strings as tight as those of many folks back in '34½.

Now for news from our foreign correspondent, Gladys Harvey. Janet Clark seems to have done pretty well for herself. Her charm won for her one of the Spanish nobility, and she now lives in her castles in Spain built during the study periods at Classical. Just across the border and in gay Parree, are "Billie" Torrey and Kay Henry designing gowns for our American shoppes. That is, as we understand it, "Billie" designs and Kay intrigues the buyers into taking them back home. It isn't at all difficult with Irene Giberti, Bertha Newhouse, Barbara Sweeney, and Eleanor Mouldan in the modeling line.

Back home again. Something outside is causing much merriment. No, it isn't a rocket plane from Mars, just one of those special stream line creations of "Brad" Howes. The idea sprouted in the old Classical days. Stream lines went out ten years ago, but you know "Brad".

We think that's Herb Riner over there in a trance. That's his business now, for he's head Turk in a fortune telling establishment. He conceived the trance idea and trained himself in Ed Smith's English 8 class. Speaking of Ed Smith, Sam Weber and Sid Greenberg are still taking P. G. courses, trying to convince him that there is no super-natural. Inez Horowitz is waiting patiently for Mr. Smith to be retired so Sam can leave school, for he doesn't seem to be making much headway.

Present Classical students are indebted to Elizabeth Clapp and Viola Carlson for the publication of their simplified editions of Cicero and Virgil, with a liberal scattering of complete translations. This is helping to eliminate the study room consultations over the Latin books.

Circulating among the guests is Ivan Fraser who is all set to tackle anyone who is doing that which if everyone did would blow up the place.

The stork feathers decorating many of the lovely ladies' hats, come from contented storks on Jack Kelleher's stork farm. The gentlemen's suits are designed and "tylered" by Norm Tyler. There have been rumors that he uses inferior grades of material, but Al Silfen, always careful in his selection, is wearing one of them.

Doris Kimball's stock company with its first leading lady, June Forer, and the character actress, Alice Fenn, is just arriving at the night club after a performance at the Odd Fellows' Hall.

That commanding voice we just heard was only Tom Webber trying to sell life insurance to Walter Rubinitch, whose life is far from safe in his laboratory where he is crying his eyes out over his latest attempts to formulate a tear gas from the juice of onions.

Dudley Page is over there somewhere in that throng of girls. He is still quite the ladies' choice if one can believe all one hears.

Guess we're going to be in pictures, for there is Jimmy Sleigh getting a flash of the crowd. If you remember, it was he who slaved so for those unlikelinesses of the grads of twenty years ago. It also looks as if we'll have the chance to see ourselves as others see us, for there are Adolph Aldrich and Allison Wells sketching cartoons of some of the celebrities.

That's Louise Cottini on the dance floor. There are wrinkles of care on her brow, for the prom tickets aren't selling so well this year. You know, of course, that she is Student Adviser at Classical, assisted by Evelyn Barbati. After school hours they still rush down to cheer Mary Autino's teams on to victory in the gym. Mary is the instructor now.

What is Howard Slavin doing before that electric eye. Looks as if we're going on the air. With television we have to be careful, and Howie is taking things into his own hands. He has first described what is going on here to-night in the corners that no other eye but Howie's could reach. The Pava girls, Naomi and Gloria, are harmonizing for a change. To relieve the tension, Charlie Corcoran is to do a ballet dance. So good was his performance on class night, that he was convinced that there was a place for men in that field. He stands alone in that line. Following this number we have that yodelling cow-boy, Milton Auerbach. He has finally managed to transpose all the yodels into the bass. Grace Billings is accompanying him, for only Gracie could understand his complicated technique. Now there is more blending of feminine voices, as Helen Harris and Hazel Edmonds, accompanied by Vanya Cuffey, sing sweet nothings into the mike.

Telegrams have already been received from some who heard and saw the broadcast. Violet Webber, Phyllis Ehrlich, and Ruth Berkwitz wired congratulations from New York, which they besieged immediately after graduation and which still thrills them. Here is another from "Maddie" Reynolds in Hollywood which she took by storm. She has struck a happy medium between Mae West and Janet Gaynor and shrouds herself in the mystery of Garbo. Eleanor Withington sent her congratulations in a poem. Even Robert Madorsky found time in the midst of his mathematical researches to send a few words. He is just about ready to submit to the waiting world the answer to the question puzzling the great mathematical minds, "How long is the long run?"

The orchestra is just swinging into the final number, "Even though it's a Sin, Take it on the Chin", which is just what to do with the class prophecy. So here are your class prophets signing off. For further information read your local newspapers.

Signed:

RUTH MARSH, Chairman.
FRANCIS TOUHEY,
BERNARD O'CONNOR,
DORIS SCOTT,
FOLKE FERRÉ.

The Prophecy on the Prophets

Doris Scott stops in at the night club, only for a few minutes, because she is now leading a fast life as wife of the Chief of the Springfield Fire Department. She joins Francis Touhey, Bernard O'Connor and Ruth Marsh who are sitting together at a corner table. Francis, who, since he sang at Mount Holyoke College with the Classical Glee Club, has had a tender spot for the college, is now conducting a prosperous laundry route between South Hadley and Springfield. Bernard O'Connor, who has constantly remained in touch with his classmates through his pamphlets on communism, is seen for once, without his soap box, but he is still accompanied by his co-worker and bodyguard, John Fitzgerald. Ruthie Marsh is assistant to the head dentist at Harvard, where, since her arrival, there seems to be an uncommon increase in toothaches.

MARIE KING.

The Song of the Class of 1934<sup>1</sup>

(Sung to the tune of Out in the Cold Again)

We've finished three years of study,
And now we're sorry it's through.
For anything now we're ready;
Thanks to you, Classical!
We've been thru lots of changes;
We're sorry to say good-bye,
But we'll always sing your praises;
Proud of you, Classical!
Yes, we utter a sigh, to say good-bye,
And leave you like this,
But deep in our hearts
There remain sweet memories of bliss.
For three years you've always helped us,
A friend both sincere and true,
But now that we're going to leave you,
We say good-bye to you!

The Presentations of the Class of 1934<sup>1</sup>

MR. RAYMOND FENNER.

To give a more dignified note to this proceeding we first donate this fitting gift, a megaphone, to our gentle counsellor, Mr. Fenner, for his use in future senior home rooms to lessen the strain on his voice while hog-calling the notices.

MURIEL WRIGHT.

To Muriel Wright, the hoarder of our mythical class funds, we present this penny bank. May it keep your millions as safely as you've kept ours, "Mur."

ROBERT FOSS.

To Bob Foss, the sedate president of 1934<sup>1</sup>/<sub>2</sub>, we present this box of Post Bran. It is supposed to promote pep, vim, and vigour in any consumer. May it give you enough vitality to dare to conduct future class meetings at Dartmouth as intelligently[?], and quietly[?], as you have conducted the meetings of the Class of 1934<sup>1</sup>/<sub>2</sub>, Bob.

JANET CLARK.

To you, Janet, voted the girl with the most dates, we proffer this package of guaranteed dates. We know their number will not exceed your own.

CHARLES CORCORAN.

Will that eccentric and witty character, Charles Corcoran, known to his fellow wiseacres as "Corky", come to the platform minus his very conspicuous outer wrapping? "Corky", accept, with our best wishes, this box of moth balls for the preservation of your collegiate racoon.

DORIS SCOTT.

Doris, our ears have grown weary of your lisped demands for a "quack-quack", so take this "ittle duckie-wuckie" as a suitable plaything for the class baby.

HAROLD WEBSTER.

Smooth may it be or rough. Always, when the going's tough, Webster's plowing the way. We hope he gets there some day. Soccer, football, baseball, and basketball—they're all the same to him. Harold, here's a plow. Keep plowing.

JUNE FORER.

Will the tiniest girl and the class actress come up here. We mean June Forer. We present you with this yeast cake, both as an aid to your rise in stature and to your rise in fame.

BERNARD O'CONNOR.

To that irresponsible but likeable chap, "Bennie" O'Connor, organizer of the "Mutual Benefit Society", we give this soap box as the rostrum for any further communistic propaganda. Remember, down with the cliques, up with the common "Peeoppulle".

ALBERT GILES.

To you, Albert, the living example of that school-girl complexion, and the recipient of envious glances from the young ladies who have to buy their color, we bestow this jar of facial cream. Long may your blushes bloom!

The Will of the Class of 1934<sup>1</sup>/<sub>2</sub>

We, the class of 1934<sup>1</sup>/<sub>2</sub>, of Classical High School, city of Springfield, state of Governor Curley, being of sound mind and body, in order to satisfy the greed of our anxious heirs and claimants, in order to relieve ourselves of the weighty burden of our many talents, in order to create the impression that we have willable worldly wealth, do proclaim and confess this bewildering bluff of King's English to be our last Will and Testament, and do hereby bequeath and get rid of our vast resources in the manner following. Let the heir beware!

ARTICLE I. Our estimable President, Robert Foss, bequeaths his stately dignity and unyielding sobriety to Hazel Palmer.

ARTICLE II. The class as a whole leaves its excessive class spirit and intelligent cooperation[?] to the class of '35 with warnings to steer clear of cliques.

ARTICLE III. Our faithful treasurer, Muriel Wright, leaves the class ledger to Fletcher Prouty just to settle an old score concerning a certain $40.

ARTICLE IV. The class as a whole leaves Mr. Fenner's frazzled nerves to his next home room with admonitions to handle with care.

ARTICLE V. Harold Webster, captain of those eleven howling bulldogs, leaves his excess popularity to that unsung bulldog hero, the waterboy.

ARTICLE VI. Miss Bowles leaves that familiar yellow pad of detention blanks to Mr. Oliver, the next lord and master of 323. May it rest in peace after a semester of toil!

ARTICLE VII. Folke Ferré, Miss Clark's honey-voiced tenor, leaves his high A to Horace Haunton.

ARTICLE VIII. Milton Auerbach, the bass profundo, leaves his low A to Dick Cronin.

ARTICLE IX. Alice Fenn, our Sarah Bernhardt, leaves her expressive eyebrows to any silenced freshman seeking to evade Miss Anthony's famous gag rule.

ARTICLE X. Herbie Brown leaves his towering, swaggering bulk to that little pygmy from Wilbraham Academy, Buck Bellows.

ARTICLE XI. Irene Giberti leaves her secrets for pulchritude to any poor brunette whom the gentlemen aren't preferring these days.

ARTICLE XII. Bradford Howes, Walter Winchell of 323, leaves to Recorder reporters his creed: "The pen is mightier than the sword."

ARTICLE XIII. Ruth Berkwitz, Phyllis Ehrlich, and Violet Webber vacate their well-worn seats in detention to future members of that 3:30 society.

ARTICLE XIV. Alfred Silfen leaves his terpsichorean skill to Gabriel Auerbach.

ARTICLE XV. Grace Billings leaves her pianistic dexterity to Eleanor Nystedt.

ARTICLE XVI. Allison Wells and Adolph Aldrich leave their artistic temperaments on the mural in Mr. Hill's office.

ARTICLE XVII. Gloria Pava leaves her spontaneous loquacity and those intimate professorial conversations to Dan Hanson.

ARTICLE XVIII. Robert Madorsky leaves his encyclopaedic accumulation of knowledge in a trust fund, the interest of which is to be distributed among future Classical pedants.

ARTICLE XIX. Helen Hayes leaves four cards of bobby pins to anyone wishing to do up her hair during Mr. Curtis's English class.

ARTICLE XX. That ABC of comradeship, Mary Autino, Evelyn Barbati, and Louise Cottini, leave their bond of friendship to Martha Furey, Rayma McGrath, and Anna Johnson.

Signed: BOB FOSS.

Signed, published, and declared by the above named President as and for the last will and testament of the class of 1934<sup>1</sup>/<sub>2</sub> in the presence of us who have signed as witnesses to the same.

Little Fish What Now? A History of The Class of 1934<sup>1</sup>/<sub>2</sub>

On State Street stands a large fish hatchery whose supervisor fancies it to be the finest in the solar system. Twice a year great shoals of stupid, little fish, innocent in the ways of the world, are trapped and driven into its yellow-brick walls. After drinking deeply from its wells of knowledge for three years, they shed its waters and once again breathe the fresh air of the world.

The catch of 1931 was a conglomeration of all sizes and colors of small fry. Tender mollusks [without backbone] laboriously making their entrance; frightened jelly-fish, spreading around in gelatinous masses; kippered herrings; and brainless, boneless sardines made up the greater part of this ichthyological collection.

After swimming helplessly about for a time, they pounced upon the first jolly pollywog and elected him "kingfish". Soon, however, this capricious fellow, having deserted his followers for a less classical hatchery, was succeeded by a more regal and pompous specimen of fish-hood.

Partly submerged in the tide of events, the fish made feeble attempts to be considered sofisticated both in appearance and conduct. Under the leadership of a fair sunfish they participated in a mysterious abortive white-shirt movement.

A contest for the laurels of Orpheus was held between this tribe and a new group of fishlings. After tossing aside all barnacles, mussels, and other parasites our fish were able to out-gurgle any would-be competitors.

During this period many shrimps were known to suffer through lack of attention; some unable to stomach the classical waters departed on uncharted seas; and others succumbed to the poisonous diet offered in the nethermost compartment of this queer institution.

As a mark of distinction, these denizens of the deep flaunted a gold banner ornate with brown letters. One day a quartet of water-snakes, mindful that the country was off the gold standard, wriggled away with the insignia, leaving everything in a whirlpool of confusion. The culprits eventually were discovered and straightway canned.

A wily octopus was stretched out in the bottom of the pool, amusing those about him with frequent flashes of wit and humor. Soon, he was seen emerging to the surface, and with the support of his faithful sword- and puffer-fish he spread his tentacles far and wide in the region of his habitat. A few elderly crabs, ever watchful of their young charges, attempted to resist the evil influence, but they were overcome by a copious effusion of fish oil. Fully in control of his domain, the octopus reorganized the tribe along democratic lines. Those aristocrats who did not obligingly relinquish their seats of authority were shortly seen floating on their backs. With his great organization, the M. B. S.*, sailing smoothly along, the octopus employed his arts in the direction of the weaker sex.

Lured on by the bright gold scales of a catfish who made him believe she was the catch of the season, the poor octopus was almost smothered in the mire and mud of fashionable society; thus proving the old adage that "the female of the fishes is more deadly than the male." As the infatuation ebbed, the octopus once again found time to apply his energies to the needs of his fellow sufferers.

The ever popular game of fish-ball was rendered even more exciting by the spectacular plays of a triple-threat starfish. The famous bullheads broke the lines and hooked their bait without breaking a fin. The exuberance of the spectators was unbounded. They slid about on their tails, threw fish-cakes smothered in mustard at one another, and strangled their opponents in drifts of sea-weed. This undignified conduct caused the supervisor to remonstrate, "none of your piscatorial impudence!" And all the fish stood up on their tails and promised, "not to do that which if everyone did would blow up the hatchery."

The passing months had seen Sacred Cods reduced to humble minnows and little suckers grown into man-eating sharks. Numerous fishsome frolics about the town were held culminating in a large banquet where those who resisted the food and escaped drowning in the salty deluge of farewells marvelled at their endurance. Their sojourn at the Piscatorial Asylum was now drawing to an end. However, the supervisor, loath to part with his beloved friends, begged them to linger on, promising a royal send-off. A good number, having no brighter prospect in mind, remained to frisk about in the currents. Full of an unquenchable "joie de vivre", a few fish carelessly flapped their tails in the faces of their guardian crabs; the supervisor threatened to asphixiate them unless they agreed to hold out the stuffed olive-branch of peace. In time all that remained of this once powerful group were seen wriggling clumsily away with little white scrolls tied to their tails by bits of ribbon to enter the more turbulent waters of the world.

Note: The class, modestly, did not wish to have a history of itself written. The Blue and White staff thought, however, that the activities of such an illustrious class should not go without recording. After diligent research this authentic history was finally written.

Ballade of The Elkquestrian

Listen, my children, and you shall hear
How Madorsky rode on an iron deer
On the third of April in 'thirty-five;
Scarcely a classicalite's revived
From this sight of that famous day and year.

He said to his friends, "If policemen tread
By Land Bank or Lodge down the hill today,
Wave a crimson bandanna aloft o'er your head
To secretly signal the devil's to pay —
One if by Land Bank and two if near me,
For I in this confounded pose will be Ready to smile and be snapped as a sight
For some cock-eyed page in that darn "Blue and White".

ODE TO RUBINWITCH

If you find the square root of a tulip,
 Add to it a pectoral fin;
 Find the rational soul of a Julep
 And divide by the head of a pin,
 Then if the color turns fuzzy in bottle,
 And shrinks in a bag of hot air,
 And the stubs of your old cigars rattle,
 Then you've found the width of a hair.

The History of the Class of 1935

TIME—Graduation Day.

CHARACTERS—All the teachers who lacked sense enough to stay away from what is the most boring thing imaginable—the graduation exercises.

QUALITY—None.

QUANTITY—All the editor has room for.

SCENE—Auditorium. Seniors are filing out. Several are reading their diplomas, but most of them are using them as clubs. Every one seems very happy, but no one knows why. Various teachers are in front of the auditorium watching the seniors go out of their lives — they hope — forever.

MISS ANTHONY — There the little brats go — out to face the hard, cruel world. What a bunch of dunces they were.

ED SMITH — I always thought that they were quite intelligent — that is to say for high school students.

MR. PHELPS [class adviser] — If I remember correctly, they nearly broke some of the honor list records.

ED SMITH — Yes. And if I remember correctly, they broke several of my windows.

MISS ANTHONY — How well I recall the day they first came. How many were there, Mr. Phelps.

MR. PHELPS — If I remember correctly, there were about 240.

MR. OLIVER [the other class adviser] — That year their class officers were Allyn Ley, President, Wilfred Stone, Vice-President, Ed Daley, Secretary, Sam Epstein, Treasurer, and Hazel Palmer, Member-at-large.

MISS CLARK [coming out of a fog] — They didn't wake up that year. They didn't have any socials.

MR. JEFFREY — What could you expect when the only live ones in the class spent most of their time in the detention room?

MR. SMITH — They gave the nicest social when they were 11B's.

MISS QUILTY — Yes, didn't they, and do you remember that perfectly ducky Junior Prom. What was it — the Voodoo Hop.

MR. OLIVER — No, No —

MISS CLARK [sotto voce] — a thousand times no.

MR. OLIVER [not noticing her] — It was the Hoodoo Hop. That was the only Junior Prom in history that a class made any money on.

MISS GUSTAFSON — Certainly. Didn't they have "Doc" Taylor as committee chairman?

MISS ANTHONY — Remember the great political picnic they held last June — not June in January but June.

MR. OLIVER — That was no political picnic. Harwood would have been elected without it.

MISS CLARK — At any rate, he is president. Any other new officers.

MR. PHELPS — Just the treasurer, Elsie Winter.

MISS WHITE — In speaking of celebrities, you mustn't leave out my star history students — Eileen Holland and Elizabeth King — the prize winners, you know.

The Prophecy of the Class of 1935

Loco Boy Makes Good

[April 1, 1965]

I am a nut, heh! heh! That's why I did what I did the way I did. It was lonely up there in Northampton, so I conked two guards and hitch-hiked back to Springfield to see my old classmates.

As I pass under the arch at Main Street, I see Bill Frangus' Club Hotcha, built on the ruins of the old Paramount Theatre. An old dilapidated taxi whirls up driven by Bill Bauer [no wonder the front end scrapes the ground], disgorging "Dapper" Deane with Joan Clark still hanging on to his arm. Patrolman Frank Wheelock signals me not to loiter, so I continue along Main Street. There's Irving Kittredge driving by in his 1935 Pontiac still scanning each corner carefully and hopefully. At Court Square, Mayor Elsie Winter [or do you prefer mayoress, Elsie?] is giving the keys of the city to "Snowshoe" Ley, famous Alaskan dog team racer. [He always did have a way with the opposite sex]. Ed Daley walks by with his nose in the air, probably scenting news for his paper, the Daley News, and there's "Shay" Lawton telling everyone who'll listen to him who's going to win the pennant and why. Hanging from a cloud, a mile above the city, in a huge sign—"Buy Taylor made clothes" from Ma Taylor's boy, Scott [Doc to you]. Connie McKay has just married her seventh husband, Willy Stone, [7 come 11], putting her one up on Peggy H. Joyce.

Across the street in Liggett's window, Elynore Burnham is explaining how she uses her noted carrot extract to keep her beeyootiful red hair always beeyootiful?

And now, my children, regard yon despondent and funereal creature, Arny Sagalyn, formerly soap box orator and now degenerated into hobo extraordinary, speaking in his same old harsh, distorted, scraping, rasping voice.

Now, a more flippant mood, my children! Here is Daniel Percival Buster Hanson, Classical's man of the hour, selling lingerie in Eleanor Dwyer's new shop Modes for Maids.

Now, little ones, I am on the corner of Main and Vernon Streets when suddenly Jane Dale rushes up trying to sell me some tickets to the latest musical comedy, Golddiggers of 1965. Naomi Gustafson and John Wells are co-starred with Web Maxson and his Central Park Casino lads. [Yowsah Webby]. Naomi and John et al were directed by Bud Campbell, and furnished with costumes designed by Spud Wheeler.

Passing a magazine stand, I see Ruth Crowe's comely countenance decorating the cover of the Woman's Home Guide, and glancing through it I discover that Emilie Little is the editor and also draws the illustrations. But what's this. Doesn't the voice coming from the radio across the street sound familiar?

Listen: "The programs are as follows, ladies and gentlemen. At 7:45, the World in Review; at 8:00, the famous comedy sketch, the Crimson Scrap-book, with leading roles by Jack Rothacher and J. Alberta Spear; followed at 9:00 by the Hagler Baby Food Program. This has as guest artists Doris Neylon Olympic Swimming Captain, Betty Abrams noted woman jockey, and Fred Nissenbaum Davis Cup raquetteer, all of whom owe their start to Hagler Baby Food. That's all, folks, this is George H. Soule signing off." Heh! heh! Some station's hard up!

At the corner of Main and State Streets, Rush Harwood is selling cartickets to generous school-children. Bank presidents aren't making enough money, so Mrs. Harwood, nee Marion Thomson, has talked him into restarting his old money-making tricks.

Attracted by the crowd at Cathedral, I enter the Church. Well bless my manly art of self-defense! A delayed wedding! Beautiful Ann Morrissey is hopefully waiting for the groom, that eminent engineer "Dannie" McCarthy. [Bad start, Dannie!] And what a best man! That literary giant, that poet extraordinary, "Donnie" McCarthy, who has made a fortune selling love poems, and runs a matrimonial bureau on the side!

I bump into Professor Wendell Coote coming out of the library with the history of Egypt under his arm, and while he is pointing out the merits of the Babylonian government, we are joined by Sam Epstein coming across the street from his old alma mamma. He was a lawyer, but now is a gym teacher and coaches the cheerleaders during the football season.

Trudging up the hill [trudge, trudge], I notice opposite Commerce High a towering marble edifice, the Anna and Chrissie Beauty Salon. Sure enough, Anna Johnson and Christine Ritchie have secured the site from army officials and are cleaning up by selling cosmetics to the schoolgirls. [Is my countenance crimson?]

I'm too tired to go farther so I invest in a newspaper and sit on the curb reading it. Boy, am I extravagant! The editor is none other than the former demon reporter from Classical, Rayma McGrath. Sounds nice, doesn't it, Ray. And such nice headlines! Bob "Scarface" Wessman, public enemy number 1, kidnaps Statue of Liberty! $500,000 ransom demanded. "Trigger" Sears and "Two-gun" Sahustri also involved. From Class banners to statues, eh Bob? H'm! Here's another item. Peggy "Gertrude Stein" Ryan receives Nobel literature prize. Now will you be good, Mr. Smith. Bob Taylor, that magnificent forester, attains front page notice as he braves a dangerous forest fire to rescue his pet sapling. An orchid to you, Mr. Taylor! And Mr. and Mrs. Alyce Martin are returning from their last expedition into reddest Russia. Such famous classmates, and I am only a nut. Heh! heh! heh! When I turn to the sporting news, the name of George Major catches my eye. The sensational fullback of the Mudville Poodles is holding out for five dollars a week. Don't be a piker, George, ask for ten bucks. And last but not least in the paper is Hazel Palmer's comic strip, "Bennie the Bartender".

Feeling kinda sorta hungry, I wend my way to the Highland just in time to catch Bob Langlois and Bob Kirkland doing things to a roast chicken [served, by the way, by the master waiter, "Shambling Paul Furey"]. They are celebrating because Kirkland, the better half [according to him] of Kirkland and Langlois, Real Estate, has just sold the Yale Bowl to an over-enthusiastic housewife. Oh fudge! I fear my freedom is gone. There's the "nut factory" posse after me, "Strong-arm" Walters and "Big Bill" Jakad. And I bet they won't even let me wear my Napoleon hat. Oh the irony of it! I, Henry "Napoleon" Moran, can't even wear my own hat. All right officers, I'll go quietly. No strait jackets, please!

Heh! heh! and two final heh! hehs!

The Will of the Class of 1935

We, the class of 1935, being in sound mind, we hope, do hereby declare this our last will and testament, realizing that our periods of detention in Classical are almost at an end, and that this will be our last opportunity to express our wishes.

ARTICLE I. We appoint as executives our great favorites, Pop-eye, the spinach eater, and Franklin Delano Roosevelt, the only remaining lover of the "Last Round Up", whose duty it will be to see that the following articles are fulfilled.

ARTICLE II. Our great football hero, Allyn Ley, leaves his shoes to the Navy, hoping that it will need more gun-boats.

ARTICLE III. Rushton Harwood, our punning president, leaves his propensity for clownishness to any dignified president of a lower class.

ARTICLE IV. George Sears leaves some of his excess hair to one of our favorite English teachers, even though it won't match.

ARTICLE V. "Junior" Wells wills his tripping gait to Ted Brooks, whose means of ambulation needs a change.

ARTICLE VI. Connie McKay, being Scotch, leaves her knack of leaving nothing to nobody, to no-one.

ARTICLE VII. Scott [Doc] Taylor, about whom we can say "one is born every minute", wills his ability to tease good-looking girls, ahem, to Kenneth Miller.

ARTICLE VIII. Colin Campbell, our school-girl complexioned cherub, donates his rosy cheeks to Hope Kibbe, our pale-faced friend.

ARTICLE IX. Sager McDonald, the curly headed, leaves his laugh, as he certainly will never need it, ringing through the corridors of Classical.

ARTICLE X. Elsie Winter wills her personality, which is in a large way responsible for her success as treasurer, to Margaret Krall.

ARTICLE XI. Web Maxson, our famous orchestra leader, bequeaths his fine manners to Josh Ratner, our quiet football hero.

ARTICLE XII. Don McCarthy leaves his carefreeness to Roger Garrison, the famous poet and student.

ARTICLE XIII. Bob Taylor wills his great dignity and poise to Charles Yeanopoulos, whose absolute lack of the same is notorious.

ARTICLE XIV. To the class of 1936 we leave some ivory soap and a strip of cloth a yard square for washing the windows in 323, so that the future industrious students may get a little light on their subjects.

ARTICLE XV. Hazel Palmer leaves her endless vocabulary of elegant words to anyone who may at some time be incapable of expressing himself, not that it will be of any help.

ARTICLE XVI. To Frank Weeks, Bradford Collins bequeaths his ability to bluff his way through Classical. How did you ever do it, Braddy.

ARTICLE XVII. To the faculty we leave the following adaptation of a famous saying: "There's a little good in every bad class, and a little bad in every good class."

ARTICLE XVIII. Ruth Levin, one of our many brilliant students, leaves her successful record to Faith Schultz; keep it nice and shiny, Faith.

ARTICLE XIX. Our radio star, Helen McKenna, leaves her voice to the halls of Classical, so that in the future years it may sing the praises of the great class of 1935.

ARTICLE XX. We leave our great wealth, business-like manner, popularity, and so-called humor to the class of 1935½.

ARTICLE XXI. Eileen Holland leaves her history medal to someone's baby brother to play with.

ARTICLE XXII. Dot Whitcomb leaves her banjo eyes, which are seen more than they see, much against her will as she thinks they will be useful in getting through college.

ARTICLE XXIII. Bill Johnson leaves his slickum to his Harvard clipped friend Dick Rathbun.

ARTICLE XXIV. The class leaves 323 in a rather poor condition, but with a little ink in the ink wells, to our 12B friends.

ARTICLE XXV. Sam Epstein leaves his ability as salesman, his success being due to his ability to talk too long and too much, to future Blue and White advertising managers.

ARTICLE XXVI. Marion Thomson, our Member-at-Large, leaves her respect toward teachers to that shy boy, Bob Freedman.

Signed, sealed, and attested on this 16th day of March, MCMXXXV.

The History (Continued from Page 69)

ED SMITH — The next year the outstanding pupils brought out ideas that seemed worth while.

MR. BROWN — Yes, the Student Treasury, but the class wouldn't stand back of it at first. They were afraid they would lose out.

ED SMITH — They came across finally, n'est-ce pas.

MISS QUILTY — Your French pronunciation is awful, Edwin.

ED SMITH — Thank you, Florence. Can't you give me some lessons.

MISS WHELAN — To change the subject, did you ever see their class banner.

MISS OTIS — Yes, it is beautiful. Brown and buff go so well together.

MRS. VAN SICKLE — When I first saw it, I became ill, but you're an art teacher and you ought to know.

MR. OLIVER — I thought it quite beautiful, such good taste and the cheapest on the market.

MR. PHELPS — If I remember correctly, my wife approved of it.

BILL FINN — So that's that.

MISS QUILTY — That year they gave the cutest dance.

MR. JEFFREY [suddenly waking up] — A fan dance?

MISS QUILTY — No, Harry, the Turkey Trot. I was a patroness, and you and Edwin were patrons.

MR. PHELPS — If I remember correctly, they put Marion Thomson in that year as Member-at-large.

MISS WHELAN — You have a wonderful memory, Mr. Phelps.

HEC REID — They certainly contributed athletic material — Allyn Ley, Shannehan, and George Major.

ED SMITH — Yes, and then Judith Beach won the Springfield Poetry Prize.

MISS CLARK — She never could have done it without your guidance, Edwin.

ED SMITH — Oh, come now, I wouldn't say that.

MISS ANTHONY — It was always a wonder to me how they managed to keep out of jail. It seemed as if some one of them was always getting arrested for reckless driving.

MR. JEFFREY — Well, of course, most of them had other things to think about besides devilry the last semester.

MR. OLIVER — Yes, they were always working on some committee, with good results too.

MISS CLARK — Well, considering the way their class pictures turned out, they needed something to cheer them up.

MR. JEFFREY — It's getting late. Let's go.

MISS CLARK — Shall I see you to-night, Edwin.

ED SMITH — No, I'm afraid not, Hazel. Mr. Baker and I are going downtown to get permanents.

MR. JEFFREY looks ready to make a mean crack, but refrains, and they all go out.

FACULTY ADVISERS

MISS CLARA A. SNELL

MRS. DOROTHY K. BEMIS

The Student Government, organized in the spring of 1934 by Rushton Harwood and Fletcher Prouty, is composed of representatives from the home rooms and the principal clubs. Its purpose is to promote student activities and maintain student spirit. This year, 1934-5 was really the first regular year of the Student Government and it has managed many affairs and accomplished much legislation, including the promotion of shows and dances and the organization of clubs, classes, and the Student Treasury.

Student Treasury

Back Row: Kenneth Steele, Fletcher Prouty.

Second Row: Mr. Arthur Curtis, Mr. Donald Ressler, Mrs. Marion Crane, Miss Bertha Davis, Miss Frances Kingsley.

The Student Treasury was organized at the beginning of the year to create a greater interest in school activities by assuring a strong financial backing. The plan adopted was formulated by the following committee: George Sears, [Chairman], Kenneth Steele, Claire Vautrain, and Fletcher Prouty with Mr. David Brown, Miss Clara Snell and Mr. Arthur Curtis as advisers. The Student Treasury combines all the expenses of student activities into one fund which is raised by the sale of student tickets. These tickets admit to almost all student affairs. This effects a considerable saving for students both in money and time. It also eliminates the necessity of a multitude of sales campaigns. The picture above is of the committee which directs the treasury work.

Although the teams record this year was just average, Classical was well represented on the gridiron. After overpowering West Springfield 18-0 and losing a close game to Worcester Classical on a fluke pass, the Bulldogs returned to the city for four home games. The first, against Holyoke which was rated as one of the best teams in this section, resulted in a hard fought tie, 6-6. The next game was lost to Tech 19-12 in what has been described as the best interschool contest in ten years. The Bulldogs next crushed Commerce 18-0 and then slumped to allow a weak but fighting Trade team to tie them 7-7. The boys were especially dissappointed in not bringing back the title for Hec Reid's last season. Two of the players, Ivan Fraser and Captain Webster, were unanimously named for the All Western Massachusetts team.

Soccer

Classical's Soccer Team had a very poor season in 1934. In the interschool league the team won only one game, losing three, and tying two. Two games were also dropped to Monson High, while Wilbraham Academy was beaten, 1-0, in a post season game.

Jakad and Daley shone on the offense for Classical while Weldon was a bulwark on the defense. The team was greatly handicapped by the lack of a suitable goalie for the greater part of the season. Coach Finn attempted to convert men from all positions into goalies but none was very successful.

Coach Gifford will be faced with quite a problem next fall because graduation will take five regulars and several capable reserves from last year's team.

Hockey

Hockey was revived in Springfield schools again this year under the direction of H. S. Davenport and Franklin Gray. Interest ran high and in spite of weather handicaps the schedule of interschool play was successfully completed.

Classical started the season very well winning three of its first four games but the team slumped and lost the last four games winding up in third place. A post-season game with Holyoke, played in rain and on poor ice, was also lost.

Although Classical suffered a poor season, Armstrong and Peacock won places on the all-city team. Peacock, Classical's diminutive goalie, was the standout player on the team all season. Although he had only a fair team in front of him, he was successful in winning all star recognition. Tyler and Shannehan also did yeoman work on the defense.

Basketball

HAROLD WEBSTER [Captain]

EMANUEL SLOTNICK [Manager]

The return of basketball to Classical, under the skilled guidance of our new coach Bob Berry, brought a fairly successful season. With no veterans and new surroundings and new faces, Bob had a very difficult task before him. The team was further handicapped by the injury of Joe Kelly, the star performer, whose effectiveness was greatly reduced by an infected toe. By managing to win all its outside games, the Blue and White representatives broke even in fourteen games. In the city series they won their first interschool victory in ten years over Tech. Unfortunately this victory was the only one against their city opponents. The Bulldogs however lost by only one point in their games with both Tech and Commerce. In spite of the mediocrity of this year's team, Coach Berry has built up a nucleus for a fine quintet for the future.

Baseball

After the baseball team's unsuccessful season last year, Bob Berry is faced with the difficult task of trying to make a winning team for Classical.

The probable starting line up will find Brunelle catching, with Weldon, Booth, Sangermano, and O'Connor sharing the pitching burden. The infield will be composed of: Root, 1st. base; O'Shea, 2nd. base; Webster, short-stop; Captain Kelly, 3rd. base. In the outfield Berry will use Shannehan and Donnellan. The pitchers will also see service in the outfield when not pitching. As usual this year's club is another weak hitting team but the infield should prove one of the best in the city defensively.

As The Blue and White goes to press the boys are very hopeful of a good season.

Tennis

The Classical tennis team in the spring of 1934 established a record which is something for all schools to shoot at. Led by its crack No. 1 man, Fred Nissenbaum, it defeated every opposing team 6-0, winning every match and losing only four sets in the total number played. After winning the city championship the team, represented by Fred, won the Western Massachusetts Scholastic Championship. Don Gifford, Bill Finn's successor, has nearly the same team for 1935.

INTRAMURAL BASKETBALL

The "A" League pennant chase was close throughout, with many thrills being provided. Although deadlocked with the Napoleonites for top honors, the Majors swept to victory in the playoffs by defeating the Napoleonites 15-12 in the semifinals and then swamping the Supercyclones 44-11 in the finals. The Supercyclones had previously pulverized the Shooting Circus 21-5 to qualify for the finals. Precisely the same situation existed in the "B" League, with the Bulldogs and Hillies tied for first place at the end of the season. In the semifinals, the Hillies stopped the fourth place Jailbirds 20-8, while the Bulldogs were having a field day at the expense of the Shrimps, the final score being 17-6. A highly-gearred last half assault gave the Bulldogs the deciding tilt 25-17, and with it went the championship of the "B" League.

Golf

The 1934 edition of Central's golf team had only a fair season as far as its scores and its standing in the city is concerned, but considering that Coach Bill Finn had only one veteran around with which to form a team, it was highly successful. In the interschool league the team won three matches, lost four and tied one. In a special match Suffield Academy was decisively beaten  $6\frac{1}{2}$ — $2\frac{1}{2}$ . As usual the high spots of the season were the matches with Tech. Central won the first match rather handily, eight to four, but in the return match Tech won a close battle,  $6\frac{1}{2}$ — $5\frac{1}{2}$ . Central also lost twice to Cathedral and once to Trade while Commerce was beaten twice and Trade tied once.

The prospects for the coming season are very bright, with almost a complete veteran team returning. The outstanding prospect is Knox who turned in a seventy-nine last year, a remarkable feat for a school-boy golfer. Returning along with Knox, will be Miller, Lawton, Bauer, F. Prouty, C. Daley, M. Arenius.

ROBERT BERRY*

Although we regret very deeply to see Hec Reid retire from the coaching field, we have great reason to welcome cordially the man who will guide our teams from now on.

Bob Berry is a graduate of Tech [ $21\frac{1}{2}$ ] and of Springfield College [ $26$ ]. While at Springfield College he was an outstanding all-around athlete and was named all-New England quarterback in his senior year. He also starred in basketball and baseball and even had offers to play professionally in the latter sport. He declined these, however, to enter coaching and immediately obtained the post at Trade.

In 1929-30 he won Trade's first basketball title. He repeated in 1930-31 and tied with Commerce in 1931-32. Besides these titles he won the city baseball championships in 1931 and 1932. He has always been extremely popular with the players as well as very efficient. He is intensely interested in his work and instills that interest in his followers. His reign at Classical should be one of good will and fine results.

DONALD GIFFORD*

Don Gifford was born in Springfield, Massachusetts, April 27, 1905. He was graduated from Central in the class of 1922 $\frac{1}{2}$  and entered Springfield College. Here he excelled in baseball and track and was on the varsity track team three years. In his senior year he captained the team and established records in the 220 and the 100 yard dashes. He was elected into the Honor Society at the college and was graduated in the class of 1927. After taking a graduate course at New York University, he returned to Springfield and taught physical education in the lower grades until his transfer to Classical High. We expect great things of Don.

*NOTE: Both Don and Bob are married (worse luck girls). Bob is the proud father of that robust little black-haired girl you have all seen at the basketball games. Don is the father of an eight months old daughter. Don also goes in for summer camps, has a mongrel dog and drives a Plymouth.

Girls Sports

The fall of '34 and spring of '35 have been especially active seasons for girl's athletics. Immediately after school opened in September, hockey and soccer practice started with large squads turning out for both sports. The soccer team was strongly supported by that stalwart forward line of Anita Hebert, Ruth Hagler, and Betsey Schadt, ably assisted at left wing by Leona Deslauriers. The Palkowski twins turned in a fine piece of work at goal, while the backfield held its own with Barbara Odette and Barbara Wright. Games with Commerce and Tech evened up in the end, with Classical's team holding its own.

Hockey fared better than it has in many a year. Claire Vautrain and Frances Demarest were especially commendable and well supported by Constance Trottier and Kaye Jones. The team won about half its games with each of the other schools.

A comparatively new sport was introduced to the girl's gym last fall, Ping-Pong. It quickly became popular with all the girls and tables were crowded during all free periods. The first tournament, for which about fifty girls signed, was a great success, and was won by Isabelle Galarneau. This spring, again, another ping-pong tournament was staged, and this time most of the girls had become accomplished players. The games were fast and furious, and only by dint of much effort was Betty Cooper able to emerge victorious.

Both fall and spring basketball games were managed in the same way. There were two divisions, advanced and beginners, both of which became very popular. The advanced group was divided into class teams who competed with fiery rivalry. The 12A team was especially strong with such players as Ruth Hagler, Eva Derber, and Doris Neylon. The 12B's, while handicapped because of their diminished team of only four or five players, showed splendid work in winning all but one of their games. Hard work was done by Betsey Schadt and Janice Brennan to make this possible. One of the most notable players on the floor was tiny Leona Deslauriers. Quick, light, and accurate, she piled up a large score in her every game.

THE BLUE AND WHITE

Swimming had just started as this went to press. A beginners group was sponsored, free-of-charge, by the Safety Council of Springfield in the Learn-to-Swim Campaign. The advanced division of thirty or so girls had excellent instruction in perfecting strokes and diving. Swimming, which was discontinued for a year, was overwhelmingly popular, and many were disappointed because the number was limited.

Here's hoping for another such successful year of sports for Classical's girls.

Hark! The Horrid Angels Sing

BY ELIZABETH CLAPP AND VIOLA CARLSON

SETTING. A golden street amid thick, puffy, white clouds. Gilded platform on right reminiscent of band concert staging in Forest Park. Pearly gates gleam in background.

CHARACTERS. Our own MISS CLARK; GABRIEL, as portrayed by Charlie Yeanopoulos who was Clarkie's cross and burden on earth. [However we guess she didn't bear her cross uncomplainingly for Charlie is still with her.] MISS ANTHONY, who has exceeded our wildest dreams by becoming an eccentric, ax-bearing angel. SAINT CECILIA, Gracie to you, and you, and you. Numerous [two hundred and seventy-four and one half to be exact] sweetfaced maidens and anaemic looking males clad in long white robes. [The sweetfaced maidens look very heavenly sans powder, lipstick, or rouge.]

ACT I [And only one]

MISS CLARK. Good heavens! If I have to hear Gabriel blow that horn, I wish he'd stop chewing gum. I never know which he's going to swallow. [Ascends platform and places a pair of horn-rimmed spectacles low on her nose. Looks over heavenly choir who are busily engaged in singing "Fare Thee Well Annabelle".] Stop!!! Stop, at once. I won't stand for a bit of nonsense this morning. Harps, please sound G. [Listens intently and an agonized expression flits over her saintly face.] That one on the left is way off pitch. Yes, you. You needn't turn around to look at someone else. Now please keep up to tempo; you drag the top of page thirteen too much for the dear little sopranos who have such a hard time holding that high A. [An appreciative laugh from the male section which is not too seraphic to resist jeering at the fairer sex. Miss CLARK taps her stand smartly with a little golden rod, presented by the Glee Clubs of 1985, peers over her glasses at her little cherubims and then they all swing into the first measures]

GABRIEL enters, holds out a white slip of paper and grimaces at the chrous while Clarkie reads it. St. Peter wants to see my best tenor at the pearly gates. I wish these people would attend to their business before coming here. All right go on. [The last remark is addressed to no one in particular, so the tenors eye one another and the whole section rises modestly. Appropriate screeches from the sopranos and lower giggles from the altos.]

The rehearsal has been going smoothly when a timid looking angel in a robe much too large starts to pass down a side street by the pavilion. Clarkie points her finger at him accusingly and he slinks back like a man condemned.

Sit up straight now! How do you expect to sing sitting on the back of your necks? Sopranos, open your mouths! You aren't going to swallow anything poisonous. Take from D again alone. St. Cecilia, [addressing a shy but skillful musician seated at the organ] didn't the boys do much better yesterday than the girls? St. Cecelia nods wordlessly and all the sweet maidens glare at this betrayer of their sex.

The chorus and orchestra continue after the sopranos have gone over their part alone, with the piano, and with the rest of the chorus. Two hundred and seventy-four and one half musicians and singers strive and strain through the selections, growing purple in the face, and hoarse. Clarkie nods and deigns to remark: Not bad!

[Suddenly she stares unbelievably. Out goes her ever-ready index finger and everyone freezes in terror, wondering who is to be cast out of heaven.] Boy in the back row, take out that gum and don't let me see you chew it in my presence again.

[MISS ANTHONY wanders in with an ax to grind and nods to Miss Clark. They confer in murmurs. Miss Anthony looks at the whole congregation as if their faces are dirty and wanders out again. They continue. Right in the middle of a soft part a harp string breaks with a resounding twang. Miss Clark pulls off her glasses, which she has been peering over all the time anyway. She glares and then dismisses the orchestra with a reminder to be at rehearsal early Thursday morning.]

Well, chorus, I can see we've still a lot of work to do on this thing. In fact, on the whole, the singing is best described by a word of five letters beginning with l and ending with y and it isn't the word lovely. The boys dragged the middle section and didn't bang their entrances. Auerbach, you're in the second group; why don't you boom out? Now what are you going to wear at the performance Friday? White dresses, gills,—we'll have no pink and gold robes, and no ankle socks. And boys, don't wear sweaters under your robes. You'll get too hot—too hot—that's why the singing was so bad today. I've asked to have it cooler for years, but we still have to sing in a turkish bath.

At the sign for dismissal the little and not-so-little angels hop off the platform and exit, singing lustily various bits of the chorus they have been rehearsing. Clarkie stares reflectively at the pearly gates, pushes back a stray, red-brown lock of hair and murmurs: What an after-life! I wish I'd gone where my basses must have gone.

A little gas,
A little oil,
A little spark,
A little coil,
A little plank,
A little nail,
Put them together
And you have Abigail.

Famous Sayings

SAMSON: I'm strong for you.
HELEN OF TROY: So this is Paris!
NERO: Keep the home fires burning.
SOLOMON: I love the ladies!
NOAH: It floats.
METHUSELAH: The first hundred years are the hardest.
QUEEN ELIZABETH: Keep your shirt on, Walter.

BILL BAUER: From the looks of you there might have been a famine.

SANDRA BOYNTON: And you look like you might have caused it.

Talented

No longer do we doubt Frank Wheelock's musical talents. While Frank was visiting relatives in the west, it rained so hard that there was a flood. As the water rose to the second-story windows, Frank's grandfather jumped onto a sofa which was floating past and Frank accompanied him on the piano.

MR. HESS: Joseph Stothert, what is the formula for water?

JOE: HIJKLMNO.

MR. HESS: Why, what on earth are you talking about?

JOE: Well, yesterday you said that it was H to O.

MISS WHELAN: Nissenbaum, what are you laughing at?

NISSENBAUM: Laugh and the world laughs with you.

MISS WHELAN: Yes, but you stay after school alone.

An Impossible Interview

MISS WOODBURY vs. GERTRUDE STEIN

MISS WOODBURY: Miss Stein, I'm afraid you are not making yourself clear. Please think it through step by step and then tell me in concise sentences just what you mean.

GERTRUDE STEIN: Clear is clear is not clear. Is steps. Why is a sentence? Clear is unclear.

MISS WOODBURY: But Miss Stein, your thoughts are jumbled; your sentences don't balance. Now if you would let  $x$  equal the unknown—

GERTRUDE STEIN: Trude is untrude. Stein is unstein.

MISS WOODBURY: Cannot you see that that is an impossible statement? If you add anything to one side, in order to keep the balance you must add it to the other side also. Thus you would have unstein is unstein. However, if you subtract—

GERTRUDE STEIN: Sub is tract; tract is tract; tract is subtract. Is buttons.

MISS WOODBURY: Buttons! Must you introduce irrelevant words into your ideas? It is a very bad habit.

GERTRUDE STEIN: Is habits, bad habits, habits bad.

MISS WOODBURY: Yes, it is quite remarkable what a hold habits can have on us. When my little nephew was first learning to—

GERTRUDE STEIN: Buttons is unbuttoned. Learn is teach is know. Is buttons!

MURRAY FREEDMAN

Perverse Human Nature

When Bernie Morris acts that way, he's grouchy; when you do it, it's nerves.

When Anna Penn takes time to do things, she's dead slow; when you do it, you're deliberate.

When Murray Freedman talks back to Ed Smith, it's fresh; when you do it, it's cute.

When Madeline Blague picks flaws in things, she's fussy; when you do it, you're discriminating.

When your parents don't like your friends, they're prejudiced; when you don't like theirs, you're simply showing that you're a good judge of human nature.

STEWART FOOTE: [to Jean McLaren] Let's take a trolley home. In a taxicab no one would see you, but in a trolley car I can show you off to a lot of people.

A Boner

Every 10B looks at books

And bones, and bones, and bones.

The 12A thinks his pals are crooks

And bones, and bones, and bones.

The biologists take many looks

At bones, and bones, and bones.

And for our stew the lunch-room cooks

More bones, and bones, and bones.

OUR OWN NURSERY RHYMES

Dillar a dollar a ten o'clock scholar
Why do you come so late?
I used to come at ten o'clock
But now I'm a P. G.

Joan and Bill went up the hill
To fetch a pail of water,
Bill fell down and broke his crown
So Joan went to Mass. State.

Mary had a little lamb
She put it on the shelf,
And every time he wagged his tail
He spanked his little self.

Little Bob Foss sat in a corner
Eating a lunchroom pie.
He put in his thumb
And looked kinda dumb
And said, "What a sucker am I!"

HOWIE SLAVIN: What did Charon do with all the money he collected from the spirits who crossed the Styx.

ROLICKING ROSY: He probably used a sand-bank.

School begins like a pig's tail. Twirly.

George Soule's handkerchief and his nose are deadly enemies, because every time they meet they come to blows.

We suppose that the reason blushes creep over the modern girl's face is that if they ran they would kick up too much dust.

"That's something I never do," exclaimed Ida Mahoney as she blushed [believe it or not] and looked down at her math assignment.

Fourth down on the one yard line, a pass, a fumble.
"Ball", cried Harold Webster, and Pat Garvey sat down and cried.

SOPH: What's all those hayseeds on your coat for, country boy?

FROSH: Them ain't hayseed, wise guy; them's wild oats.

You neck?
No? Heck! [Apology to Ogden Nash].

You would not pan
The jokes we use,
Could you but see
Those we refuse.

Green Pastures

SCENE.—A flowery meadow.

TIME.—Any summer day.

CHARACTERS:—Billy—a masterful boy.

Robenia—an equally masterful girl.

Hazel—her bosom friend.

Signhild—a plump, jolly girl.

Smitty 1—a clever boy with dark, curly hair.

Smitty 1'—a clever boy with dark straight hair.

Smitty 2—a clever boy.

[Smitty 1 and Smitty 1' are brothers, but Smitty 2 is not related to them.]

Irving—a tall, lanky boy somewhat younger than the rest.

Florence—a dark, unhurrying girl.

Elizabeth—a very shy little girl.

Harry—a wistful timid-appearing boy.

Gertrude—a frank, sturdy girl.

As the scene opens, several of the characters are in the meadow in various attitudes of abandon. Others are seen approaching in the distance.

SMITTY 1.—[who is lying on his back, gazing dreamily at the sky.] Did you ever stop to think that since there are only three sides to a triangle, there must be only three angles?

SMITTY 1'.—[who is similarly reclining.] Oh obviously! But what an amazing discovery! Just then Signhild, who has been muttering, "a biece of bie, a gup of goffee, dea with doast", while picking flowers, rises and goes to meet Smitty 2, who is seen skipping up to the group. She is closely followed by Gertrude and Florence.

SIGNHILD, FLORENCE, and GERTRUDE, in chorus.—Come Smitty, don't you want to sit under a tree so [with a tactful glance at his head] you won't get sunburned.

SMITTY 2.—[with an incredible out-thrust of his jaw.] Aw, I don't wanna be alone. [Then, smiling angelically.] Can't I play with the rest of you?

GIRLS.—Of course you can! [They cast reproachful glances at one another for daring to displease Smitty 2. Wild shrieks are heard, and Robenia rushes up, brandishing a hatchet.]

ROBENIA.—Ki yippee yi yi! I'm a wild Indian. I'm going to scalp you all. The others smile indulgently, being accustomed to Robenia's pranks. They look in the direction from which she has come, knowing Hazel can't be far away. Sure enough, she is coming, in her bare feet, caroling merrily.

HAZEL. [Singing.]—"The waters gawther, they rush along." Oh, I've just been wading and all the little fishes were so cute.

BILLY.—[who in any group naturally takes the lead.] Well I guess we're all here. Oh no, where's Irving? After an extensive search Irving is discovered, hidden in the tall grass, reading Conrad Aiken. He is persuaded to join the others.

BILLY.—Well kids, what shall we do today. Let's have each one say what he'd like to play. I move that we play soldiers. [With a "conquering-the-foe" air he rises and begins to stride up and down so militantly that he causes Gertrude to say:—]

GERTRUDE.—You'd certainly look grand, Billy, at the head of an army. Slightly crestfallen, Billy goes back to his place and turns to Elizabeth who is quietly sitting with her hands folded in her lap, gazing raptly at her new black patent-leather shoes.

ELIZABETH.—[with a rub at an imaginary spot on the left shoe.]—Well, if you'd all like to, let's play house. [Losing her shyness, she continues:] Billy could be the father; and Irving the baby, but—looking thoughtfully around at the girls—who'd be the mother?

SMITTY 2.—[who is rather disgruntled because up to this time he has always been considered the baby.]—Aw heck, that's a girl's game! Let's play something exciting—like Macbeth.—[and warming up to his subject, he lisps a little as he continues:]—Florence, you could be Lady Macbeth, you scream well; Billy will be Banquo; the three witches will be Gertrude, Signhild and Elizabeth; Robenia can be the thunder and lightning; Hazel will do nicely for the "alarums and excursions"—that'll make a lot of noise; and—[with a deprecating cough]—I'll be Macbeth.

GREEN PASTURES (Continued)

At this announcement there are various expressions of disapproval. Elizabeth bursts out crying, and Robenia, who has been sitting with a satisfied smile, chokes angrily, realizing the double meaning.

BILLY—[again speaking for the group]—No Smitty, I don't think we want to play that. What do you say, Harry?

HARRY—[who has been quietly whittling, looks up, slowly pushing a stray lock of hair out of his eyes, and speaking in a vague, rather timid voice, says:]—Well, I really don't know. There must be some game which would be lots of fun, but I can't seem to think of the right one. [With his lock of hair again in his eyes, he pensively goes back to his whittling.]

HAZEL—[who for some reason is anxious to return to the Macbeth theme.]—Well, since Smitty 2 is so keen on Macbeth, why don't we sing that new Russian opera, "Lady Macbeth of N——?" Of course, I think I could do the leading part, perhaps a little better than the rest of you.

ROBENIA—[jumping up and waving her celebrated weapon.]—Oh, no, dear, I must do the leading part. It would be so effective with my hatchet. [And with the argument rising as to who looks the most Russian, Signhild, wishing to make peace, says:]

SIGNHILD. Let's all go over "Frere Jacques" a few times. That's a rollicking round.

SMITTY 1. Oh that's no fun. I move that we have a nice little informal class of Euclid. That would be really interesting.

SMITTY 1'. Oh, obviously. And besides we ought never to waste a minute, you know. Look at the busy bee—. I second the motion.

GERTRUDE. Heavens, no. That's much too dry. I suggest that we all stand and do some deep breathing exercises.

ALL. Oh, Gert, it's much too hot to exercise.

GERTRUDE—[dryly, with a swift glance around the circle.]—Well, some of us could certainly stand it.

FLORENCE. Oh kids, I know a lovely game. It's called gossip. Some one leaves the group and the rest all tell things they know about that person, and then he comes back and tries to guess who said them. It's really lots of fun—and educational, too. But please don't choose me; I'm much too comfortable to move. [The rest all reject this game—some scornfully, but the majority nervously.]

IRVING—[stammering a little in his excitement and desire to impress his mature reasoning upon the others:] Here's a game in which I have indulged with much pleasurable enjoyment. One rotates around the group, each repeating an adjective describing himself, and going consecutively through the alphabet. For instance I might say—adorable, and the person next to me might say—er—assinine. Just a supposition, of course.

THE BLUE AND WHITE

SMITTY 2—[who happens to be sitting next to him.]—Well, let's keep it a supposition. I suggest that we all do just as we please—and I for one, am going to practice spelling. [He goes away to a secluded spot.]

And so as the scene closes, Smitty 2 is conducting a class in spelling. On one side of him is Robenia, polishing her hatchet, while on the other side is Harry, still placidly whittling. Seated across from Smitty 2 is Irving, who is gazing at him in admiring awe, and meditatively chewing grass. Hazel, who has always yearned to take up spelling, is seated near the group, listening attentively while she absently pulls the petals off a daisy. In another spot we see Billy marching up and down, while Signhild sits beating time and singing Faust's "Soldiers' Chorus".

Meanwhile Smitty 1 and Smitty 1' are lying on their stomachs, sharing the same geometry book. Elizabeth, apart from the others, has collected several twigs and is happily playing house. Her patent leather shoes have been carefully placed under a tree, in the shade. Florence is sitting. Not being fond of spelling or whittling, she is just sitting. Gertrude has climbed up into one of the trees and is trying to beat her own record for chinning.

Just as the curtain goes down we see Robenia leave the spelling class, go a little distance from the rest, and after glancing guiltily around, surreptitiously begin to read. She is reading Anthony Adverse.

CURTAIN.
